PREFACE

When, more than two score years ago, I labored long and almost without respite in the transcription of the land, military and associated legal records of a great body of Kentucky pioneers, filed with other early documents such as wills and contracts in the offices of the Secretary of State and the Clerk of the Court of Appeals in the Capitol at Frankfort, I came inadvertently to the feeling that perhaps I was preparing an index to a vast store of primary historical material of the utmost value, just at the time a new, widely-spread and aggressive trend of public interest in the earliest landowners and their families was asserting itself throughout the mid-western part of the United States. Today the volume in hand—The Old Kentucky Entries and Deeds—affords an unmeasurable treasure trove of more than 45,000 separate, legal records of authentic inscription and date for those whose interest centers on the earliest and most dependable functions and activities of the Commonwealth of Kentucky and its first citizens.

Since the first printing of this book, as arranged and sponsored by the farsighted Board of Trustees of the Filson Club of Louisville, Kentucky in 1926, the generous and continuous praise accorded it by learned historians, historical librarians and the public generally throughout our country and abroad, has served, since the first issue has been out of print and essentially unobtainable for more than 25 years, to validate the judgement of those gentlemen in Baltimore, Maryland, who, sensing the importance of perpetuating into the largely indeterminate future, the earliest recorded activities of the Kentucky pioneers, have set their hands, their hearts and their enterprise into the printing of this, the second printing of this foundation book of early Kentucky state and family history: The Old Kentucky Entries and Deeds!

FOREWORD

This work is logically a companion volume to the Kentucky Land Grants which was issued as Filson Club Publications No. 33 during the year 1925. While engaged in the research necessary to the preparation of the great body of documentary matter brought together in that book, it became evident that much important material having to do with the land of the Commonwealth of Kentucky remained without a complete index. These records consisted of two groups of manuscript documents: I. The early civil land entries, and military land warrants and entries in the State Land Office; and II. The first deeds, wills and powers of attorney relative to land lodged in the custody of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals at Frankfort.

Believing that these early land documents, issued under the laws of both the Commonwealths of Virginia and Kentucky during the latter part of the 18th and early part of the 19th century were not only of great historical importance, but also of inestimable genealogical and economic value, the writer undertook their compilation nearly a year ago. As here presented they are systematically arranged and follow a chronology similar to the Kentucky Land Grants This volume is thus a complete index to these old manuscript records and is designed as a source book for the use of historical workers generally, land title attorneys, abstract clerks, genealogists and others who may find interest in the first documents pertaining to the land in the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

OLD KENTUCKY ENTRIES AND DEEDS

CHAPTER I.

OLD KENTUCKY ENTRIES AND DEEDS

The boundaries of Kentucky were actually fixed, though rather indefinitely, in the Charter of Virginia which was written in 1609. This document after describing the distances along the Atlantic north and south of the mouth of Chesapeake Bay extended the lands "West and Northwest to the South Sea." Somewhat later the parallel of 36° 30' north was established as the southern boundary, while the Mississippi River was indicated as the limitation on the west and the Ohio River on the north. These early descriptions of Virginia's back country are clearly suggestive of the paucity of reliable information available concerning the land and its geography during the infancy of the Commonwealth. At this time Kentucky was entirely unknown to the English who were destined so shortly to settle and hold it in the face of active resistance on the part of the fortified French and their Indian allies.

The early government of the Colony of Virginia was somewhat communal in form. This was particularly true with respect to the land and its improvement. During the latter part of the first half-century of occupation, however, radical modifications were instituted and successfully maintained. Under Governor William Berkeley, in 1660, the government of Virginia became one essentially in which authority was vested in a privileged class of large land owners.[1] This concentration of power in the hands of a wealthy aristocratic minority, so similar to the established English social order, forced the less fortunate Colonists to the unfertile unprotected uplands back of the tidewater plantations which were early pre-empted and thoroughly settled in 1671.[2] Actually it brought about Bacon's Rebellion in 1676 and paved the way during the succeeding half-century for that notable migration which settled the great valley of Virginia almost immediately after the now famous expedition of Governor Alexander Spotswood across the Blue Ridge in 1716.

The early exploratory and pioneering movement into the rich intermountain limestone valley of Virginia had a deeper significance than was realized at the time. It was in fact the first Colonial expansion of importance beyond the original seaboard plantations. With it "the West" definitely took its place in American history. The great expanse of undulating limestone agricultural land developed an appeal which rapidly outgrew the bounds of the mother colony. Such records as exist for this early time show a great intermingling of Irish, English and Scotch from the Eastern tidewater, and Germans and other European nationals from Pennsylvania and the North. Hardy, restless, intrepid spirits, they were bound together by the strong bonds of common and all-surrounding dangers and hardships born of the wilderness. Within a few short years these men and women pushed the English colonial frontier boldly across the unmarked ridges of the Allegheny Mountains and brought about the discovery and settlement of Kentucky.

As a prelude to this era of rapid Colonial expansion, there was, of course, much in the way of individual exploration. Hunters and traders acting upon individual initiative pressed into the uncharted West. Many failed to return, but the conquering spirit of the time could not be stayed. The period was an important one in accumulating general information with respect to the far western territory, but the actual permanent value of the earliest white explorations of the back country was relatively slight. Indeed so obscure were the earliest travels in Kentucky that records of some of them have only recently been disclosed and authenticated, while many probably will remain forever as vague and uncertain traditions. Gabriel Arthur,[3] a young Virginian, the first white man of record to see and traverse a considerable portion of Kentucky, entered this State, near where Catlettsburg now stands, in 1674. After being taken captive by the Shawnees he made his way across the maze of ridges composing the mountains of Eastern Kentucky to the old Cherokee village on the headwaters of the Tennessee River, sometime later returning to tidewater Virginia.

Shortly thereafter exploratory parties of Frenchmen traversed the waters of the Ohio, and a few years later, in 1750, Dr. Thomas Walker in the employment of the Loyal Land Company undertook his significant westward explorations across the Appalachians and through Cumberland Gap. In the following year Christopher Gist in similar capacity scouting for the Ohio Company came down from the North, and crossing the Ohio traversed Eastern Kentucky. These well known explorations were shortly followed by such men as John Finley,[4] James McBride[5] and others, concerning some of which there is neither record nor acceptable tradition. Then followed the great French and Indian war which for a period of almost exactly ten years from 1754 closed the western country to exploration. Finally in 1765 Colonel George Croghan came down the Ohio River, and in 1769 Daniel Boone following the trails blazed by the Long Hunters passed through Cumberland Gap into Kentucky. This immortal scout may fairly be accredited with having initiated the movement which culminated within a few years in the settlement of the rich agricultural limestone region of North Central Kentucky.

The movement of so large a body of adventuring immigrants into the new Kentucky country was not accomplished without friction. Ambitious schemes of land speculation furthered by wealthy non-resident purchasers constantly encountered the resolutely maintained claims of the poor squatter and homesteader, who depended neither infrequently nor unsuccessfully upon his actual occupation of the land backed by a rather free use of the rifle. Land disputes were of common occurrence, and bad feeling culminating in open fisticuffs and lonely homicides marked this dramatic period. Interest in the rich unappropriated land of Kentucky County was so intense as to overshadow the real dangers of the times, and General George Rogers Clark, as well as other commanders of lesser rank, frequently found great difficulty in enlisting sufficient troops to meet the imminent dangers of the rapid and bloody forays of the warring Indian tribes.

At last with the American Revolution in progress and her principal attentions directed to the winning of this conflict, Virginia, not unmindful of the chaotic land conditions which were developing within her western borders, sought a way out of the difficulty by legislative action. In 1772 Fincastle County, named for George, Lord Fincastle, son of Lord Dunmore, Governor of Virginia, was erected out of Botetourt County.[8] In 1777 the western portion of Fincastle County, including all of the lands west of the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River, was set aside by the General Assembly of Virginia as Kentucky County.[8] During the short period from 1777 to 1780 Kentucky County included essentially the same territory now enclosed within this Commonwealth. In 1780 the "Mother Colony" divided Kentucky County into three parts, Jefferson, Lincoln and Fayette counties[9], and land in this territory, which had not already been taken up under laws previous to the celebrated general land laws of Virginia enacted in 1779, was entered upon, surveyed and granted according to the stipulations of this latter legislation.

The first surveys of importance in Kentucky were thus made while this territory was comprised within the limits of Fincastle County, Virginia. After 1777, the grants appear as in Kentucky County, Virginia. The earliest land grants during this period of rapid settlement were made in Colonial times under royal authority.[10] Many of them were taken up under the King's Proclamation of 1763.[11] All of these grants were governed by laws of an archaic nature, lax in specification and so general in application as actually to invite great confusion and no end of legal contests. Numerous enactments of the Virginia General Assembly had been approved by the King of England to prevent land frauds. Typical of these was an act[12] passed by Virginia in October, 1748, which stipulated the bounds of official procedure for county and other surveyors in entering upon unclaimed lands. Though bolstered up with a number of such minor enactments, the general land laws of the Old Dominion finally became so universally recognized as inadequate that special steps were taken during the latter days of the war for American Independence to prepare a new land code.

In May, 1779, Virginia finally passed a series of land laws which applied to all of the western country, including Kentucky. These new laws controlled the method by which most of the land was taken up in this State in the post-Colonial period. The first of these was an act concerning officers, sailors, and marines which declared that "at the end of the war every of the said soldiers, sailors, and marines, shall be entitled to a grant of 100 acres of any unappropriated land within this Commonwealth, and every of the officers commanding the said soldiers, sailors, or marines, shall be entitled to a grant of like quantity of lands as is allowed to the officers of the same rank in the Virginia regiments on continental establishment, which they shall locate according to the directions of the laws, for which no purchase shall be required on behalf of the Commonwealth".[13] This law further states that "every soldier who enlisted under Colonel George Rogers Clark, and continued therein till the taking the several posts in the Illinois country, shall at the end of the war be entitled to a grant of 200 acres of any unappropriated lands within this Commonwealth, on the terms herein before declared".[13]

Then followed an enactment to adjust and settle the titles of claimants to unpatented lands prior to the establishment of Virginia's land office.[14] The act provided that all surveys of waste and unappropriated land made upon any of the western waters before 1778, when executed by a commissioned surveyor in furtherance of large treasury warrant or military rights, were validated. To these were added those strictly military rights in the district set apart for officers and soldiers of Virginia in the Continental and State service. Many of these were surveyed under the direction of military officers, and location was adjudged upon basis of priority. Virginia also recognized and gave preferred rights covering certain quantities of land, usually 400 acres, to those settlers who prior to January 1, 1778, had made "a crop of corn or had resided in the country upon the western waters for at least one year." There were secured in the same manner pre-emption rights to not exceeding 400 acres per person. If prior to January 1, 1778, settlers "had marked out or chosen for themselves any waste or unappropriated lands, building a house or hut or made other improvements thereon", pre-emption rights were allowed covering any reasonable quantity of land including improvements but not to exceed 1,000 acres. Single pre-emptions, however, were not allowed for more than one such improvement.

Another class of rights of pre-emption to not more than 400 acres was also given. These were called "village rights" and were accorded to families who had settled in villages or stations but had raised a crop elsewhere. These rights were based upon priority. Pre-emption of 1,000 acres adjoining actual settlements was also allowed upon a basis of priority. Entries too were recognized upon military warrants, treasury warrants and pre-emption warrants where departure was made from the land to which the rights were attached, the basis of validation resting as previously upon priority of location with the county surveyor. County court orders in favor of poor persons were also recognized.[15] For the completion of details necessary to each of these land rights twelve months was generally allowed prior to forfeiture.

A further result of the general land law of May, 1779, was the division of the western territory of Virginia into four districts, the last or fourth of which comprised Kentucky County. For the Kentucky District, as for the others, the Governor was authorized with the advice of the Council to appoint four commissioners under the seal of the Commonwealth "to continue in office eight months for the purpose of collecting, adjusting and determining such claims, and four months thereafter for the purpose of adjusting the claims of settlers on lands surveyed for the aforesaid companies".[16]

At the same session an act was passed establishing a general land office. This law recited the terms and manner of granting waste and unappropriated lands.[17] It provided for a register, the issuance of land warrants by purchase through the Treasury, the appointment of county surveyors and deputies, and recording of land entries. Many minor but important details were included, particularly with respect to the entering of the land and preparation of the subsequent grants. Provision was introduced to prevent fraud in these land transactions, but unfortunately this portion of the law was quite frequently evaded and many unjust and indefensible claims were set up for choice land situated on the waters of Upper Salt River, Elkhorn, Stoner, Hinkston and other creeks in the much coveted Blue Grass country.

In the succeeding pages there are presented as completely as it was possible to get them the old land entries of this early Kentucky period. The Lincoln County entries, Chapter II, number 4,959, and extend from 1779 to 1787. They consist of two books. The Fayette County entries, Chapter III, number 7,008, date from 1782 to 1794 and are found in four books. The Jefferson County entries, Chapter IV, most numerous of all, total 11,518. They begin in 1779 and end in 1785. The Military Warrants, Chapter V, comprise a group of medium size totaling 4,744, and extend from 1782 to 1793. The Military entries, Chapter VI, comprise the smallest group of all, with only 1,567 names extending in the period of record from 1784 to 1797. All of the above enumerated records are found in the Kentucky Land Office at Frankfort, Kentucky, except the Jefferson County entries, Chapter IV, which are found, as evident copies, in two old volumes lodged in the custody of the Jefferson County Court Clerk in Louisville.* There is reason to believe that because of their relatively small number the Lincoln entries may be incomplete, but if additional entry books for this old county still exist diligent search for them has failed to bring them to light.

The latter part of this volume is devoted to indexing the old manuscript records in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals at Frankfort, Kentucky. During the early days of this Commonwealth the law provided for the recording of deeds and many other important legal instruments in Frankfort. Chapter VII presents the grantees 5,208, being recorded in these old deeds; Chapter VIII exhibits the grantors, who total 5,619. Chapter IX shows Court of Appeals, Deeds—Wills, and Chapter X presents a cross-indexed list of 1,909 grantors and grantees in power of attorney. Transcript of these latter records, Chapters VII to X, may be secured from the Clerk of the Court of Appeals at Frankfort, while for the former —Chapters II to VI—application should be made to the Register of the Land Office at Frankfort, except in the special case of the Jefferson County entries—Chapter IV— to the Clerk of Jefferson County, Louisville, Kentucky.
